COVER

This sunny summer scene of his Melinda and her baby is by Victor Baldwin of Los Angeles whose work has so many times appeared on our editorial and advertising pages.

ECONOMICS

Just as most of you would rather spend time with your cats and other hobbies than with the business of earning a living, so we at CATS prefer to think about our editorial and production work.

But, of necessity, the commercial part of our operation has to loom large in our thinking and planning.

Our big problem now is the one which faces every American: how to meet current inflationary processes and how to plan for the threats of the future.

The price of CATS Magazine has remained stationary since June 1954. Yet during these five years our costs for producing each copy have increased more than thirty percent.

Fortunately, increases in circulation and in advertising have helped us to keep feeding our cats and ourselves—but imminent further increases in postage, printing, and other costs make it appear doubtful that we can hold the line much longer.

Our thinking as of now is that early in 1960 we will be forced to raise the subscription price of CATS to $4.00 per year if we are to be able to continue to bring you an attractive, well-printed, and well-edited magazine.

We are not making this a definite notice, since we still hope to be able to avoid it. But we are mentioning the possibility now, so that if you wish, you may save several dollars by renewing your subscriptions in the near future for two, three, or five years instead of waiting until the new rates go into effect.

Two years now are $6.00; three years $8.50; and five years $12.50—enabling you to save as much as $7.50 against the new one-year price.

CATS FOR CATS

Dear Editors:

I have enjoyed my subscription to your magazine for many years. In fact, now I take a double subscription in order to always be able to give a copy to a friend or introduce it to some new office where it is not known. This month's extra copy was left in the waiting room of a local veterinarian.

Because I love CATS and everything in it, perhaps you will tolerate a word of criticism. I object to covers such as was this June's. Every magazine-rack has a dozen or more children's publications, full of their photos. Please don't misunderstand me. I have raised five children of my own. . . I love them, but once you start the policy of putting children on the cover, everyone is going to want his child on the cover. I, for one, buy your magazine to see the pictures of cats and read all the news about these little animals. Please, please, let's not start mixing in people.

The cover pictures have been excellent. Let us keep cats alone for cover shots.

COLLECTOR

Dear Editors:

I am a comparatively new subscriber to CATS and I'd like you to know I have found it to be a wonderful magazine.

I'd like to ask your readers if they would send me pictures of any and all kinds of cats. I collect them and have a large scrapbook started. If anyone would care to send photographs of their cats, I would appreciate it very much.

Thank you from someone who will keep reading CATS Magazine as long as you continue to publish it.

APOCRYPHAL LORE

Dear Editors:

In regards to your June CATS, in The Back Fence, I noticed it says that cats are not mentioned in the Bible. May I call your attention to the Book of Baruch, or to be more exact, in the letter of Jeremias at the end of that book; 6:20-21

"Their faces are black with the smoke that is made in the house. Owls and swallow and other birds fly upon their bodies and upon their heads, and cats in like manner."

You will find this mentioned in the book "The Sign of Jonas" written by Thomas Merton who is Father Louis of the Trappist Monks.

ONWARD AND UPWARD

Dear Editors:

First, I'd like to congratulate you on publishing the poem "Rake's Progress" (CATS, June) by Elijah L. Jacobs. I think it is one of the truest poems about a cat that I have ever read. I sent copies to all my cat-loving friends.

Second, I have a problem. Is there any way to un-spoil a cat? We have two of them and since my husband and I both work we haven't too much time to fuss with their food. They are both happy with a brand of food that sold three cans for a quarter. One day, in a moment of madness, we fed them the fourteen-cents-a-can kind. After that they refused the cheaper variety. Then, when the store was out of the fourteen-cent cans, we brought them something costing nineteen cents. From that time on the little dears turned up their noses at the fourteen cent food. So it has gone—from nineteen to twenty-one, to twenty-three, twenty-seven. Once in a while I make an attempt to start over, but these darlings just shudder and look up reproachfully. I believe they'd starve before they'd give in. They are worth the expense, but I live in dread of the day they discover crab-meat at ninety-five cents a tin.

MORE ABOUT MUFFET

Dear Editors:

As a subscriber to CATS Magazine, which Mrs. Neuberger and I always enjoy reading, I am enclosing a photograph of Mrs. Neuberger with our cat, Muffet, whose travels you discussed in the April Back Fence.

Incidentally, Muffet, who is half Manx and half Tabby, receives letters from his fellow cats all over the United States and even from such foreign lands as Austria, Israel, and the British Isles. His picture has appeared in such periodicals as Time, Holiday, the New York Times, and Newsweek.

Muffet was born in April of 1953 and has been our constant companion since August of that year. He has now made nine trips across the American continent between Portland, Oregon, and Washington, D.C.—both by airplane and train, but Muffet prefers the train, because, on the train, he can be with his mistress and master.

Best good wishes,

IT'S NEVER TOO EARLY

by E. Dale Mitch

Theatrical Cats are a species well known to the majority of summer stock workers. There seems to be a certain breed of cat that invariably appears when the theatre is opened for the new season and that takes to the stage like an old trooper. Whether it is the smell of the make-up and paint, the lights, or just the pure excitement that appeals to their hyper-sensitivity and draws them, I do not know. But many a Feline Star I have known and harbored: Schneider in Michigan, Elvira in North Carolina (who loved to sleep on the light beam sixteen feet above the stage floor), The Great Sarah in Indiana, and above all, Jo (Josephine) in Massachusetts last summer.

Jo arrived early one morning during a rehearsal for F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Young and Beautiful. She strolled onto the stage, on cue, with proper dignity, through the doorway on stage where four actors were awaiting the leading lady, one Josephine, by name. Needless to say the rehearsal was stopped cold. Jo graciously accepted her applause and name and remained as mistress, patron, and the unquestionable leading lady of the playhouse. And one week later, upon a lavish purple velvet cloak (she had an affinity for velvet and feathery costumes), she brought forth three young: a black and white, a gray and white, and a solid black beauty. The kittens were immediately named after suitable characters in the plays, the black darling receiving Travis De Copet—from a Fitzgerald character constantly dressed in black and of a highly superior attitude; which Travis showed from the beginning, having little or nothing to do with her sisters except at feeding.

Contrary to superstition black cats have always been an omen of good portent to me, beginning with Midnight numbered one to seven as a child (named after Captain Midnight, the radio hero of every boy at that time.) Thus Travis captured her first fan and admirer in me and I had found a new roommate. Leaving to the mother early training (such as grasshopper catching, which is devine to watch), I was determined to start training Travis as soon as possible. I believe that there is a misconception that cats cannot be trained at all, or that they are obstinate, or cannot be trained until full grown. All of which are untrue. The best time to start training the kitten is as soon as it begins to know who you are, to like and trust you, and to want to be with you. I made all attempts for Travis to come to know me and be with me as much as possible. Besides playing with her, it is important for the kitten to just be with you and become aware of your smell, touch, vibrations and handling.

Travis soon made her own wants and comforts known, taking a liking to my shoulder and immediately scrambling up to it from my arms for a better look at the world or the performance going on. In less than a week, with diligent attention and careful assistance, she learned how to support herself and ride there, and would readily sleep there when tired. From that time on she seldom missed a performance from the wings, alternately giving her attention to the actors, the scenery or the massive light board with its intricate dials and dimmers that fascinated her. Thus the first necessary lesson of trust and belonging was easily accomplished.

But as with all kittens, and even mature cats, there is the problem of controlling their investigations—the items they select for toys and whisk off—as well as that of keeping these fleet felines out of the reaches of trouble and from places they do not belong.

The problem is even doubled in a theatre. Imagine the raft of goodies for their delight among the hundreds of tubes and caps of make-up, eyebrow pencils, false hair, mirrors—not to mention the weekly change of costumes, furniture, and properties such as lamps, flowers, dishes, stage food, decor accessories. The smallest of these items allowed to disappear under the quick paw of la Travis would have caused disaster on stage any night. The missing of a feathered quill pen (which she loved) could have shattered a highly dramatic scene in one production, or the mere lack of the right number of pieces of muffin would have ruined a perfectly timed sequence that had taken days to perfect. Not to mention that a cat suddenly appearing in a satchel or wastebasket might have broken-up performers and audience. The risk was too great. There was a need for immediate training . . . but then necessity often is our best teacher.

From the experience that followed I firmly advocate: it is never too early to start training the kitten. And the early lessons are seldom, if ever, forgotten or broken. The young animal responds rapidly, and it is so much easier to help establish right behavior patterns than break old ones. Since the scenery location as well as everything connected with each production changed weekly, it was useless to attempt to teach her where not to go or what not to touch. Something all-applying was necessary. Thus teaching me: verbal commands are best. The first thing to do is to find some noise, word or sound the cat responds to. I found a simple snap of the finger to be the best. It was accompanied by the word "no", and the two became simultaneously associated. The undesirable object was removed from her, following this command, and she was only rapped with a finger when she persisted after the same object after several "no's" and snaps.

There was a purpose in the dual command. Too often it is impossible to speak aloud backstage during a performance, or a part of it, therefore, a soft snap could accomplish the same command. But, when she was too far away, conditions permitting, a verbal "no" carried easier than a snap.

Patience is the by-word for the trainer at all times. Teaching an animal to respond to your words is no different than teaching a child, and both animal and child beating is abominable! There is a great difference between a rap with a single finger and a slap, and neither child nor animal will understand the slap or the reason for it. We must teach them what the words mean first, by patiently showing them, as well as praising them highly and affectionately when they do respond correctly. The only way anything has ever been won is by love. This should be remembered.

Substitution is another important factor of the training. Let the cat know what she can play with and what is permissible. One or two items are best to start with. I, for instance, used a ribbon of bells, and for quieter occasions, a ball of yarn (as my grandmother used.) The substitution items should be of such a nature that they will not be confused with other items. There is nothing that will resemble a string of shiny, tinkling bells, and a ball of any type is usually only for play. They should also be items that will not be about the home for any other purpose than the animal's enjoyment. Above all they must not be unpleasant in taste or odor, as so many of the commercial plastics and rubbers are. (This is why most animals shun them. Not because of their size or shape, but their taste and smell. Even a baby will shun a sour nipple.)

Upon being told "no" and having the

Since cap and gown
I've traveled far—
Learned French verbs
In Ciel Le Barr;
In Pekin labored
Canton tonals;
High in the Andes

Often hot, and sometimes colder,
Language-rich and somewhat older,
Grown perchance a little bolder,
I found a cat in Ankapur
And learned from her
To parse a purr.

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL

I am sad and dejected,
Life's complexities taunt me
Steeped in misery's brew;
I bow my head on my shoulders
And give way to blackest despair,
All is utter futility.

A pliant body moves near me
Slipping as quiet as thought,
Rough tongue licks cheek and hand,
Brown velvet paws huddle close,
I hear that comforting purr . . .
All is not lost, not yet!

Tipped over the philodendrum again?
Who hid my fountain pen under the

Then fell head first in the bath tub?

Who woke the Persian asleep on

Who discovered Kleenex is great

Who stole our Siamese Lady's

Just the smallest, blackest cat in the

Miss Bones.

Who cuddles up close when the nights are cold?
Who of the cats is most brave and
most bold?
Who purrs the loudest? Who is most gay?
Who's first to greet us when we've been away?
Miss Bones.

endearing, the quaint,
Our wide awake demon, our soft

THIS IS A CAT?

There's a very odd creature that lives in our house.
It nibbles on cheese; but it isn't a mouse.
It retrieves what we throw, like an obedient puppy.
It paddles in water with the ease of a guppy.

From the curtains it swings, as deft
as a monkey.
It's stubborn sometimes as a mule
or a donkey.
It chews our green plants; but it's no kin to the cows,
Because its fur is soft gray and it
purrs and meows!

—Ruth Sayre Bitter

AFTER THE SHOWERS

Pit-pat, pit-pat,
Here comes my kit-cat
Through the wet flowers
After the showers.

Hate to get wet, Cat?
Rain make you fret, cat,
Daintily leaping
Past puddles and creeping
Where damp branches stir
That might streak your fur?

Frolicsome frisker,
Twitching a whisker,
Pit-pat, pit-pat,
Here comes my kit-cat!
—Ethel Jacobson

PAS DE SEUL

Starkly in an alabaster room
Twin scarlet candles bloom from stems
Of glass; the milky cat revolves
To witches' time, its loins and cowl
Suffused with inky fur, among
The Roman cushions alternately barred
In turquoise, rose and flame or night
And reds and purples of a wine,
Then whirls within the crimson
Concave chair, bizzare upon
The latening hour, and flies to claim
With lethal claw the shining chintz
In bands the colors of itself,
Astir in answer on the eerie wind.
—Pat Wallace Latner

CAT-FLUENZA

My cat's got a cold:
He sneezes so greatly,
If his tail did not hold
He'd lose it completely!

His shoulders hunch up;
His nose quivers fiercely;
Way down to his rump
He feels, oh, so beastly!

He quakes in the corner—
He's just scared to move!
Deprived of his power
To sleep, or to prove

His own special way
For catching a mouse—
My poor Jingo, this day
Remains in the house!

WE SHOWED BY HAM RADIO

by Nat McKelvey

In the days when crystal radio sets were popular, fanatics often worried about their cat's whiskers. As an amateur radio operator who is a cat fancier, I worry not only about the whiskers but about the whole cat—especially when I have sent one away to a distant show to be handled by an agent.

To alleviate my anxiety, I now combine my two hobbies, keeping day to day track of my traveling felines via amateur radio-telephone. There is a possibility that other cat fanciers who are not radio "hams" can avail themselves of this service through the generosity of the ham fraternity. Cat showing by radio works this way:

Last winter, I entered my Blue Cream Longhair Jr. Ch. Rocky Mt. Mariposa of Vernamac in the ACFA show in Minneapolis. Now Minneapolis is a "fur piece" from Tucson and the climate is often hostile by comparison with our southern Arizona winter weather. The show was held on February 14 and 15. On February 11, I took to the air, cornered a Minneapolis ham, K0AAE, George Sumner, and asked for a weather report. George replied, "Cold and clear. What's your interest?"

When I told him that I had a cat scheduled to appear at the show in his city, he countered: "Want to talk with your handler?"

Of course I did. So George called Miss Karen Bjerkeng of the Karabee Cattery, using the telephone number that I supplied. As soon as Karen came on the phone, George connected the "Ameche" to his transmitter, and Karen and I were in direct communication. Hams know this as a "phone patch".

I told Karen that Mariposa would be shipped on Friday the 13th and gave her the arrival time. I also briefed her on Posa's eating habits, personality, and general idiosyncracies. George broke in to suggest that we meet on the air Friday as soon after the cat was airborne as I could return to my transmitter.

Came Friday. I put Posa on Frontier Airlines for Phoenix where she would pick up Western Air for a direct flight to Minneapolis. Then I went home. In Minneapolis, George was waiting and so was Karen—on the telephone at her home.

"Yes," I said, "Mariposa is on her way. She'll be seeing you at midnight your time."

"Fine," Karen answered. "I'll be at the airport to meet her."

The next day, Saturday, I met K0AAE again, and again George had Karen on the phone.

"Posa arrived on time and in excellent condition," Karen informed me. "She ate, used her box and is ready for the show."

What a contrast was this experience when compared to other times when I have sent cats to distant shows. The cat would arrive—at least as far as I knew—and then I wouldn't hear a thing from it until it was back in Tucson. Even then, I wouldn't know how it had fared in competition. Usually days, and sometimes, even weeks went by before a report would come to me. But not this time.

Early on Monday, after the Minneapolis show closed, George met me on the air again. Though Karen was at work, her mother, Mrs. Phoebe Bjerkeng, entry clerk for the Minneapolis shows, was on the radio-phone hook-up with a complete run-down on how Mariposa fared at the quadruple show.

In one show, she was second best Tabby & Tortie; in another Best of Color and Best Tabby & Tortie. She had two firsts and two "winners" and completed her ACFA triple championship. All this, thanks to ham radio, I found out the day after the show and by personal and lengthy conversation with the people directly concerned.

On Tuesday, the Bjerkengs planned to return Mariposa to me. Again I made a radio schedule with George. At the appointed hour, I called him and was surprised to be answered by W0WMA, Ken Holgate, another Minneapolis ham, operating "single side-band", a type of emission that I was unable to receive with any great facility. I was biting my nails, trying to get Ken's message and not having much luck, when a ham in San Mateo, Calif., broke in.

"I read your Minneapolis contact," said H. G. "Alex" Alexander, K6DEY, "and I'll relay his message to you." So Alex did. First, he told me George, K0AAE, had gotten a job and couldn't maintain the schedule, so he sent Ken to take his place. Secondly, Mariposa was airborne and, at that moment, winging her way home to Tucson. She would arrive at 6 P.M. What a relief to have the information exactly and promptly: Oh yes, she did arrive on time and in good health—and what a story she told me by her purring, pawing, and excited meowing.

After Alex had passed me the message from Minneapolis, he wanted to know in detail what this cat fancy is all about, informing me that he owns a Chocolate Point Siamese of which he is very fond.

"Well," I said, "since you are in San Mateo, why don't you attend the big ACA show being held there on February 21 and 22? You'll see nearly every breed of cat and you may even catch 'cat fancy fever'."

"Wonderful," Alex replied. "And after the show is over, I'll meet you on Monday and let you know which cat did what."

So, on Monday, February 23, I had a radio session with Alex and got a complete report on the San Mateo show. The only fanciers who had it faster were the ones who actually attended.

Now, I have been a licensed ham operator for 22 years and a cat lover for 17. As far as I know, I am the only ham who is a cat fancier and, therefore, the only cat fancier who is a ham. If there are any others who have this dual hobby, I would enjoy hearing from them.

Meanwhile, cat fanciers who are not hams can take advantage of ham generosity, using their facilities to keep in touch with cats who may be on the show circuit. Hams are an obliging lot, and there is, as every ham knows, no charge for this service. Hams can be reached in virtually every city and hamlet of the U.S.A. through local amateur radio clubs. If you can't find the club, then contact your Civil Defense agency or local radio and TV stations. There are nearly always hams in Civil Defense and in commercial radio and television broadcasting work.

There are other ways in which ham radio can and has served the cat fancy. I recall getting a frantic plea from Miss Viola Fiscus, owner of the Shady Grove Cattery in Tucson. She was expecting a very fine Blue Longhair male from Ohio, via plane, and the cat was many hours and several flights over-due. I got on the air, raised a Cleveland ham, K8AET, Len, who obligingly contacted by telephone the air-lines in his area. He learned that the errant cat had, indeed, been shipped as promised but that it had missed a connection in Chicago and would arrive in Tucson the following day. At the appointed hour, Miss Fiscus met her cat. Meantime, the anxiety of not knowing what had happened to it had been relieved, courtesy of ham radio.

Probably, my use of ham radio in connection with the cat fancy represents a "first" for both hobbies. I hope that my experience in creating a happy marriage between the two will inspire other hams to acquire an interest in cats and other cat fanciers to become interested in amateur radio. I know for sure that my station, W7PEY, is doing considerable missionary work in this direction.

My friends Eleanor and Foster Hammonds, W3BIW and W3BUX, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., attended their first cat show last year as a direct result of having gotten the cat fancy virus from me via ham radio. From them, I received a complete, prompt, and first hand report of the Wm. Penn show at Philadelphia. Now these admirable folks have acquired a purebred Chinchilla Longhair and, I have no doubt, will be showing him one day.

Federal ham license inspectors will, I am sure, be seeing a few cat fanciers applying for ham radio licenses. Really, combining the two hobbies is the "cat's whiskers".

Mrs. Merald E. Hoag's Nor-Mont cats make up much of this year's All-Southern story as they have done so often in the past. It was in 1957 that Nor-Mont cats took the two top wins, and after barely being beaten out for first pin 1958, they are back in the four top positions this time.

Highest-scoring, and the South's candidate for Cat of the Year is the famous and beautiful Blue Longhair Female Gr. Ch. Career Girl of Nor-Mont. While in second place, the O.S. Southern Cat, is the widely-acclaimed Blue Longhair Male, Gr. Ch. Nor-Mont Blue Parader. Both jumped from Southern Honorable Mention in '58 to the very top rung this year.

To complete the Nor-Mont sweep of the top spots, highest-scoring Shorthair is Gr. Ch. Medicine Lake Sakie of Nor-Mont, and O. S. Shorthair is Gr. Ch. Medicine Lake Kyo-Ko of Nor-Mont.

Never before in All-American history has one cattery made such a complete Sectional sweep, gaining the four highest scores and the two top awards for both Longhairs and Shorthairs.

Do partly to Mrs. Hoag's efforts, Maryland cats gain an unprecedented seventeen CATS Magazine awards, but they are far outshone in number by the felines of Florida who won fifty-five, and of Texans with thirty-six. Twelve awards go to Louisiana, ten to the District of Columbia, nine to Kentucky, and six to Virginia.

The rest are divided: Alabama five, Georgia four, Oklahoma and South Carolina two, and Tennessee one.

In number of winners, Mrs. Hoag again leads with eight. Six awards each go to Whitney Abt and to Margaret Newton; five to Adeline Dickey, Beth O'Donovan, and Florence Kemmer. Two owners have four; seven, three; and twenty, two.

Oldest 1959 winner in point of A-S history is Longhill's Tres Chic of Flagstone who made her initial appearance in 1953 and has been All-Southern every year since. Db. Gr. Ch. Bult'h Hex started as All-Southern Kitten in 1955, and 1956 saw the initiation of fourteen of this year's winners. Eight started in 1957, and

NINE MINQUAS BLANKET EAST

The two high points of the All-Eastern contest this year are a study in contrast. Sweeping through the entire front with outstanding stock in a wide range of colors, Jane and Tom Martinke's Longhairs gained nine All-Eastern and EHM ribbons—a record in the East equalled only by their same 1957 achievement.

Meanwhile, Bob and Lois Green were putting all their efforts behind a single magnificent Black Longhair male, Gr. Ch. Vel-Vene's Voodoo, who last year had shown he had what it takes by being the All-Eastern O.S. Cat.

Their plans, too, paid off, and by the highest score in history Voodoo gained top place in the East, and is competing against the other Sectional winners for 1959 Cat of the Year.

The East's top female is Jeanne Singer's great Gr. & Tr. Ch. Singa Penelope. She will vie for O.S. Cat of the Year.

O.S. Longhair honors go to Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Minqua's Punksutawney, and O.S. Shorthair is Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Cymri Cyro.

Tr. Ch. Selene's Firefly is high-scoring Abyssinian, Db. Ch. Sherwood Tria of Bridle Trail top Burmese, and Tr. Ch. Casa Gato's Zorina O'Bograe top Russian Blue.

High Manx is Gr. & Qd. Ch. Tra-Mar's

Eight owners will display three Eastern awards each, and twenty-one will have two.

Pennsylvania cats gain the most honors: thirty-eight, while thirty-one go to New York and twenty-two to New Jersey. Delaware has thirteen, Connecticut nine, Massachusetts six, and Rhode Island one. Seven cross the border to Canada.

This season was the most successful ever for the East with more shows and more entries than ever before.

ACA had six shows, ACFA one, CFA nine, and CFF six. 481 cats made All-Eastern points, and 127 went on to earn their ribbons.

For the complete record, and photos of many of the winners, see section beginning on page 22.

"Tips to the Novice"
by
Blanche Wolfram

To say definitely which of the organs of the cat is the most important would be quite a task. However, all of us know that the heart is one of the vital organs if not the most important. Its main purpose is to move the blood through the arteries and veins to and from all parts of the body. Since the blood is the means of transportation of the essential nutrients, oxygen and water, we can readily see the importance of the action of the heart in getting them there. We also know that when the heart stops, death quickly follows. Therefore, the continual action of the heart is an indication of life itself. It is the closest approach to perpetual motion in life.

A healthy heart is dependent upon a balanced diet for it too must be fed essential nutrients to keep itself in a state of good health. So here is another reason why you must see to it that your cat receives the proper food. I keep referring back to the diet, for it is my belief there is nothing more important than making sure your cat is properly fed. By the same token, fresh oxygen is a necessity too. This has all been discussed in great detail before so let's get on with our discussion of the heart, what it is and what it is called upon to do.

The heart is a pear-shaped, or should we say, egg-shaped, organ that lies between the lungs in the cat's chest not exactly in the center but a little toward the left side. It begins at about the fourth or fifth rib and extends backwards to the eighth rib. Surrounding the heart is a double-walled sac known as the pericardium which protects it and also relieves pressure from the lungs. The heart is hollow inside and is divided by partitions into four distinct chambers. One partition divides it lengthwise into two sides, the left and the right. These two sides are then divided crosswise into two halves. The so-called upper chambers are known as the auricles and the lower chambers, the ventricles. Therefore, we have a left auricle, a right auricle, a left ventricle, and a right ventricle. These chambers are lined on the inside of the heart with a smooth membrane called the endocardium.

Between the right auricle and the right ventricle is an opening controlled by the tricuspid valve, and between the left auricle and the left ventricle an opening controlled by the bicuspid valve. The pulmonary valve controls the opening from the right ventricle to the pulmonary artery, and the aortic valve controls the opening between the left ventricle into the aorta. These valves are tough, strong tissues and their purpose is to control the flow of the blood so that it always travels in the same direction. They are so constructed that when there is pressure on one side they will close and when there is pressure from the other side they will open.

The exterior of the heart is muscular tissue. The walls of the ventricles are thicker than the walls of the auricles, and the wall of the left ventricle is about three times as thick as the wall of the right ventricle. The difference in the relative thickness is because of the amount of work each is called upon to perform.

The heart is a marvelously constructed pump—actually, four pumps in one. When the muscles contract the chambers shrink, thereby forcing the blood through; when the muscles relax the chambers return to normal and are again filled with blood. In the action of the heart, both auricles contract at the same time, and immediately after both ventricles contract. There is then a period of rest which is about equal to the total time it took the auricles and ventricles to contract. If you will place an ear to the chest of your cat you will hear two distinct sounds. During the contraction a heavy dull sound is heard and as the aortic and pulmonary valves close, a sharp short sound will be heard. A healthy cat's heart will sound something like—lubb-dupp—with the dupp coming quickly after the lubb and these sounds will be continuously and evenly spaced in timing. Hearts that are not working properly will have irregular beats and those that are diseased will have a sort of swishing sound to them. Try it on your cat and you can become accustomed to the various sounds and will recognize trouble if it comes.

To better understand the heart's action, let's follow the course of the blood as it travels through the heart as we have diagrammed it. Although the heart receives blood from all parts of the body and sends it back to all parts of the body, only a few of the larger blood-carrying tubes are actually connected to the heart. In a later article we shall discuss these tubes—the arteries and veins—along with how they distribute the blood to the various parts of the body.) Entering the right auricle, the blood comes through the superior vena cava which receives blood from the head, front legs, and shoulders; through the inferior vena cava comes the blood from the trunk, back legs, and tail; the coronary vein brings the blood from the muscles of the heart itself. These fill the right auricle which slowly permits the blood to flow through the tricuspid valve, and when the contraction occurs all the blood in the auricle is forced into the right ventricle. The right ventricle is then filled to capacity and its contraction occurs. With its contraction, it closes the tricuspid valve preventing any blood from returning to the right auricle and at the same time, opens the pulmonary valve forcing the blood out through the pulmonary artery to the lungs. In the lungs the blood is purified and it returns to the heart through the pulmonary veins into the left auricle. As the left auricle fills, it slowly lets some of the blood flow through the bicuspid valve and when the contraction occurs it forces all the blood from the left artery into the left ventricle. When the left ventricle contracts it closes the bicuspid valve and opens the aortic valve forcing the blood through the aorta which by a system of distribution carries blood to every part of the body of the cat. The contractions of the heart bring about so-called systolic pressure and the relaxation of the heart causes the diastolic pressure in what is known as the cardiac cycle. This will be discussed in our article on general circulation, for there is where it reaches its maximum importance.

There is a time in life when this complete system is somewhat different. That is when the kitten is in the uterus of the pregnant queen. Then the fetus is not breathing and the use of the lungs does not come into play. The unborn kittens receive their oxygen and food supply by way of the blood of the mother cat through the transfer at the placenta.

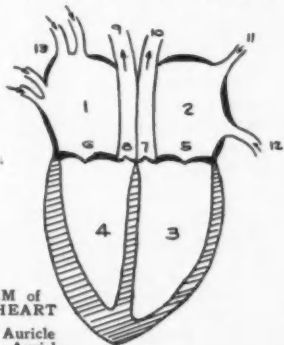

DIAGRAM OF CAT'S HEART

|--------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Left Auricle | 10. Pulmonary Artery |
| 2. Right Auricle | 11. Superior Vena Cava |

| 9. Aorta | |

Since there is no direct connection between the circulatory system of the mother and the circulatory system of the kitten, the heart of the kitten must be working to move the blood around through its own little body. The umbilical cord connecting the placenta and the kitten contains two umbilical arteries which connect to the kitten's aorta and a single umbilical vein which takes the blood to the liver and the inferior vena cava of the kitten. Now here is where the kitten's circulatory system changes. The blood coming through the inferior vena cava enters the right auricle where it follows two courses. Some of the blood will go directly to the left auricle through an opening called the foramen ovale and then into the left ventricle where it is forced out through the aorta. The other blood in the right auricle goes through the right ventricle and out through the pulmonary artery, where a little of the blood circulates through the lungs to keep them in readiness for operation but the majority of the blood goes through a bypass tube known as the ductus arteriosus directly to the aorta. This is the system which supplies the oxygen to the unborn kitten. However, as soon as the kitten is born the wonderful phenomenon of independent life takes place—the lungs begin to function and all the blood travels through them so that the kitten will obtain its own oxygen supply. The foramen ovale then begins to close and the ductus arteriosus begins to shut off. If these two do not close within say about five or six days the kittens will turn blue and die. The reason for this is that the blood will not go through the lungs where the carbon dioxide is removed and the fresh oxygen is picked up.

Now, another important hint: As you know, when the kitten is born there is a sac which covers its head. This sac must be removed immediately or the kitten will suffocate. By always being a midwife to your cat you will help save many a kitten that would die because of the inability of the mother cat to clean away the sac. As you know, many of our children are getting the new plastic bags and covering their heads resulting in their dying by suffocation. This sac on the kitten's head acts in the same manner—keep your kittens alive by taking the proper care of them at this very important moment.

During the past year several new treatments for fungus conditions (ringworm) have been developed, and we have been giving all of them thorough tests.

Next month we will describe three products which we believe now make it possible to definitely control fungus.

good!

EASY TO GIVE! Dab on pet's nose, he licks it off! Relieves and prevents Hairball, a common cause of illness in cats and some long-haired dogs. Symptoms may be vomiting, constipation, eating grass, loss of appetite. Give NOSE LAX once a week and stop choking, gagging, coughing due to hair. Use as a laxative, too. HAPPIER, HEALTHIER THANKS TO VALUE

...the new, safe, sanitary pet litter that eliminates odors, simplifies disposal

Because cats are the most naturally neat of all pets, they're happier with Wyandotte VALUE.
Healthier, too.

This new pet litter is sanitary and safe . . .
contains no chemicals to harm pets . . . eliminates odors by absorbing moisture quickly.
What's more, VALUE is dust-free . . . doesn't track . . . won't cause cats to sneeze and cough.
And since VALUE is so effective and so absorbent,
a 2-inch layer in the cat-box is all that's needed.
(You'll find that this economy of use simplifies disposal as well.)

So be kind to your cats . . . and yourself.
Try new Wyandotte VALUE. For the name of your nearest dealer, send the coupon below.

New Wyandotte VALUE
comes in three convenient sizes: 5-, 15-, and 25-pound bags.

SPECIAL NON-CH SHOW AT EASTERN

Eastern Cat Fanciers (ACA) are adding a special All Breed Kitten, Neuter, Spay, and Household Pet Show to their orthodox AB, LH, and SH Show at Philadelphia, September 26.

BANNER SHOW YEAR AHEAD

Full details on the shows mentioned above and on the other spectaculars coming up are given on the show calendar page. Never before have so many shows been scheduled at this time. So if you're making up your own show itinerary or just looking for the shows in your area make full use of it now, and every month as we add the new dates which are announced.

NOW IT'S JUST SOUTHERN D&FHC (No "EXCEPT")

At the CFA Annual Meeting held in Chicago, the two resolutions presented by this Club were approved by the Board of Directors:

1. That the Club be allowed to drop the "Except Siamese" from the name of the club.
2. That the Club be allowed to sponsor All Shorthair Shows OR All Shorthair Shows except Siamese.

(Previously, many fanciers misunderstood the name of the Club, and many clubs could not use our Show Franchise because it would have meant the expense of two Shorthair Specialties. Thus, the action will be very beneficial to us and to the Fancy.)

PET SURGERY IS SAFE

By Elma K. Moore

It is difficult to detect illness in a patient who can't talk. When our cat refused to eat we were suspicious. When she cried out as though in pain we phoned a veterinarian and a half later her tiny body was stretched out on a table in his immaculate examining room. She offered little resistance until he probed her abdomen when she almost leaped out the window.

"It's kidney stones," he said, "we'll have to operate to save her." The doctor carried her gently into another room while her anxious friends were left outside in suspense.

Gussie was anesthetized and scalped. A mixture of penicillin and streptomycin was her dish and she was kept under sedation to ease pain and to prevent her from clawing the dressings. Not a germ could have reached first base in that all-modern pet hospital, but the procedure was frustrating to the patient because she couldn't talk about her operation. After a week she fixed her green eyes on the doctor for one last disdainful glare before going home. That was three years ago. Today Gussie is a healthy, lively cat and you'd never guess that a handful of rock-like calcium deposits was removed from her innards.

Fifty years ago such an operation was unknown in veterinary medicine. Today it can be performed safely because the techniques of small-animal surgery have been developed in great detail. There is a growing demand for such work and pet hospitals rival those for humans in their ability to meet emergencies. Their standard equipment includes oxygen tents, X-rays, blood transfusion apparatus, sulfa drugs and anodynes for pain relief, but probably the most amazing work is done in the operating room. Recently a neighbor's cat was hit by a car. It's diaphragm was so badly ruptured that the abdominal organs were pushed into the chest cavity, but an emergency operation was performed and the cat made a complete recovery. Such a feat is not uncommon today, and an increasing number of people now save their pets with surgery instead of dooming them to catdom's happy hunting ground.

Bone repair work is extensively done. One operation consists of removing an entire hip and replacing the ball and socket with an orthopedic appliance so the animal can walk normally again. An expandable bone pin to grow with young animals has been perfected and is being used in fracture cases. Blindness is usually caused by cataracts but they can be removed and the pet's sight restored when the clouded lens is replaced by a plastic one.

There are more than thirty million cats in the United States today, and our nation has around nineteen thousand veterinarians (including seventy women) to keep them healthy. These men and women study for a minimum of six years before receiving a D.V.M. degree and many of them are surgeons. Pet-loving Americans pay more than 250 million dollars a year to veterinarians for keeping their pets healthy.

A noted dean at an Eastern University can't resist cats. Just like hobos they know which door to go to and at the latest count he had ten. He happily pays a veterinarian large fees for sewing up Tom's fight-torn ears or Tabby's chewed tail and, like most pet owners, he thinks it is money well spent.

Some folks said our Gussie wouldn't live long after her operation but after three years she has only one visible defect. She sags in the middle. Maybe a post-operative tuck in her paunchy stomach would improve her looks but she'll probably outlast her owner without it.

Don't hesitate to use surgery to prolong your cat's life.

It is safe and humane, and there are some four thousand pet hospitals in America to help you.

Fanciers Forum

TWO OF EVERYTHING?

This is in reference to Lynne Vanderpoel's article about Frost and/or Lilac Points in the June CATS.

First, the writer points up the variables that enter into the judging of any cat, and apparently suggests two different standards for these cats.

Would she then have a standard written for Light Seal and Dark Seal? Light Blue and Dark Blue Domestics? Light Red and Dark Red Longhairs?

There is no genetic difference between a Frost and/or Lilac Point Siamese cat.

There has been a great deal of leniency written into the standards, but the Frost and/or Lilac Point Siamese remain one and the same thing, and any attempt to separately categorize them can lead only to chaos.

BIGGER CATS

Dear Editors:

Having been a cat lover all my life I was delighted to discover a magazine especially for people like me. CATS is really wonderful.

I do have one criticism, that being the magazine is simply too little. I usually read a copy from cover to cover, including the ads, which I enjoy, in less than an hour. I realize the material for the true stories must be scarce, but what about some fiction?

I hope the future will bring a bigger CATS, but for now, congratulations on the work you are doing so well.

SPLIT PERSONALITY

Dear Editors:

Am attaching a photograph of Alice who has been enjoying your magazine since receiving it as a Christmas gift subscription from a feline friend.

Of all the people who have seen Alice, no one has ever heard of a cat with a perfect checker-board face. The dividing line goes completely down the center of her stomach.

She is half Siamese and half "spook", two and one-half years old, a very light eater and terribly spoiled. Thinks all cats have double beds to sleep on and shrimp for dessert every night. She is also the most gentle and clean cat I have ever known.

I imagine you receive many, many letters from fond owners of "unusual" cats, but would certainly appreciate hearing from you about mine.

Miss Mary Diehl

item removed from her, Travis was immediately given one of the substitutes to play with. In less than two days the substitution items were well known and recognizable to her and joyfully accepted in place of the items she had found. In an older animal it might have taken weeks.

I cannot impress the importance of these substitution articles enough; in many instances the animal will not even touch other things when her own toys are available to her and nearby. And there is nothing more rewarding when, after careful, patient work, she responds to your verbal commands. Having items taken away from her, reprimanded, as well as being given her own toys, Travis soon learned to stop what she was doing at once when the command was given. And she was affectionately rewarded when she properly obeyed. As the kittens mature a tasty morsel can be added as reward also.

But I must admit, even the most devoted trainer will arrive too late sometimes: as on the afternoon lovely black Travis overturned a box of white powder upon herself. Or the evening when she made her debut, discovered too late, and coyly slept through the second scene of In the Summer House on a corner of the back porch set, on stage.

I learned, too, teach one thing at a time. Felines are intelligent and willing to please, but they will become confused and uncertain if too many things are being taught at once. Never start a new lesson before the old one is learned. These are the important ones to start with: (1) the manner and way which you prefer to handle or hold her. I preferred having her on my shoulder, being always welcome there and least in the way, leaving myself free to work. (2) When misbehaving or causing mischief to immediately stop when commanded. As mentioned, I find the word "no" as well as a snap of the finger infallible. Once these basics have been established, there is no limit to what the animal can learn by verbal commands. Thus, not overlooking her mother's teachings, by the time Travis was ten weeks old she had mastered all of the above, as well as knowing her name and coming when called. The entire secret is beginning when the animal is young, and it is never too early.

Travis is approaching her first birthday, is perfectly mannered and obeys to the word. Using the same "no" and snap, in a matter of transference she has learned not to scratch furniture, nor to eat the leaves off of the ivy, where she is not allowed, nor to bite or scratch. And she never violates any of them, or other household taboos. She has since been taught by verbal commands to play with "claws in", to "go to bed", to "jump" onto my shoulder without clawing, "sit up", "lie down", to "fetch", and to "bring" me her toy to play.

I believe it also important not to use words which sound the same and might confuse her, like "down" and "drop", "lie" or "leap", or any sound that might resemble her name.

The reward is great and the pleasure doubled to have a beautifully mannered cat, who pleases, and obeys. There is no reason why any animal cannot be as lovely as . . . well as Travis. All by verbal command! But again, the secret is in patience, affection, and careful explanation and understanding. Teach with these three rules and I believe there is no end to the possibilities and the joy.

(From her shoulder observation post Travis has watched these words being written and only asks me to add she is once again taking to the stage, after all she is a Theatrical Cat, and will be appearing in Massachusetts again this summer, in the grand tradition.)

The new lifetime subscription makes an ideal lifetime gift. It is only $50.00 and includes a guarantee of twenty years minimum delivery—either to the subscriber or to any designated beneficiary.

The Back Fence . . .

Chill winds blowing. Snow . . . great beautiful banks of that wonderful cold white stuff. What more delightful vision could the mind fashion on a hot humid day in August?

Kathryn Winslow, lecturer, author and friend of CATS and cats, sent us a news item from the News-Miner of Fairbanks, Alaska.

A five-month-old Longhair, answering to the name of Pussy, has always enjoyed sitting out on a four-inch-wide window ledge of the eighth floor apartment of her owner, Lo Hickson.

Recently, the Midnight Sun Sky Divers were having a parachuting exhibition and Pussy was watching them from her special perch. A sudden noise caused Mrs. Hickson to look up and see Pussy leaping from the eighth-story sill to the ground. Rushing down, she found the cat none the worse from the unscheduled jump.

Miss Winslow, an authority on Alaska, added a note of explanation. The deep snow evidently broke the cat's descent sufficiently to save her from injury. Flyers in the north experience difficulty in judging distances onto snow covered areas. But, although Pussy still sits on her high ledge, she hasn't repeated the feat.

Next, of course to snow, comes water for happy mental pictures this kind of a day. The Chicago Sun-Times told of Lucky, an at-the-moment not-adored pet of the Lucio family.

Anthony Lucio, father and bread-winner of the family arose as usual at 5:30 and went to the kitchen to make the coffee prior to shaving.

The kitchen was inundated . . . and Lucky was sitting atop the flooded sink with a "this will teach you" smile on his face. The automatic drain was closed and the faucet wide open. The broken teapot, knocked down from the shelf, was just an extra to show he hadn't spent all night just sitting watching the water.

The consequences of the escapade were listed by the Lucios as follows:

Mr. Lucio missed his breakfast because he spent the hour designated for eating, mopping.

Mrs. Lucio missed an extra hour's sleep. She was inducted into the mopping-up corps.

The laundry was found to be a soggy mess.

Family tension increased: the elder Lucios—Mr. and Mrs.—suggesting Lucky find a new home; five children resisting this suggestion.

Lucio arrived unshaven at his job—Lucky had turned on the hot water spigot.

Perhaps this boy really did need a change of scenery—and according to the many clippings sent by subscribers, the place to get it is the Blackford Hotel for Cats in Hollywood, California.

This must certainly be the most exclusive hotel in catdom. The owner, James W. Blackford, says he has reservations months in advance and even then can't guarantee shelter. As you may have gathered, the clientele is composed of felines. Designed to make sure that the cats of movie stars and other financially comfortable persons will live in the surroundings expected of their social position when their owners are out of town.

Rates are on the American plan—meals are served with FM music and, of course, all rooms have air conditioning. Fresh linens daily, landscaped grounds and gardens for sunbathing and reception halls for callers.

Mr. Blackford recalls cats whose diets include yogurt and strawberries, and cantaloupe mixed with spanish peanuts, and another who favors shrimp cocktail with pitted ripe olives. One pampered puss arrived with his own deep-freeze full of bull meat.

Following the house rule of careful hotels, no female cats may enter the rooms of male cats unwanted. . . . Even with the door left open?

Walton-On-Thames has a news item worthy of print in the New York Journal-American, but it took a cat to do it.

Tibbles, an English Domestic, had two doors left open to him. He began life as a stray but realized a cat with a home is generally well-fed and happy. The old saw—if one is good, two must be better—evidently occurred to him. He found himself two homes . . . and conveniently, across the street from each other.

He stayed at the Glover home. He stayed with the Remingtons. And in both, spent enough time to allay suspicions. Two beds, six meals and double snack-time.

It was a merry existence, until the Remingtons decided Tibbles was getting too old. The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals called and put him to sleep.

Now Glover is threatening to take legal action against Remington for destroying his cat while Remington insists that old Tibs was their cat.

A kitten may also loom large in attracting the city fathers to the hazards of over-large sewer openings in Houston, Texas.

When a mother had to crawl into a storm sewer to rescue her daughter's kitten, she realized that her children and the neighborhood children could be trapped in these sewers as they have openings, large enough for adults to squeeze through, without grates or covers. Now all the mothers are demanding safety measures.

In Wilmington, Delaware, manholes and cats also took headlines. Motorists were astonished the other day to see a woman's head sticking out of a sewer manhole. This however, was not an idle type whim of Mrs. Johnson.

It began with a telephone call to the Delaware Humane Association advising them that a mother cat and three kittens were down a water-filled sewer. The only ones on duty at the shelter were women, but that didn't delay the response.

Mrs. K. C. Johnson and Mrs. William Schotte hurried to the disaster area. A quick survey convinced them the only solution lay in going down into the sewer to try to locate the cats. In pelting rain, these ladies lifted the iron covering and lowered themselves into the hole.

Back and forth they splashed through the water with only a flashlight to guide them. They could hear the kittens but couldn't find them. They only stopped long enough to poke their heads out for a breath of fresh air once in a while.

Hours later, additional help—Mrs. Johnson's husband and Mr. and Mrs. John Escott—arrived. The ladies were the only ones who would fit into the opening so they continued to slip and grope in the darkness until they found the three babies high and dry on a projection where their mother had carried them. The mother cat could not be found. The search was abandoned temporarily.

They took the kits home to be warmed and fed. Next day, another group went out and using food as a lure, finally succeeded in bringing the family together. They will be kept at the shelter until a home is found for them.

Excelsior.

PUSS 'n BOOTS GIVES CATS

"Health you can see!"

Only a superior cat food could show such obvious results so quickly

There's a world of difference between owning "a cat" and owning a "healthy, lively cat". Because a healthy cat means one with a good disposition, fur like the softest silk, and eyes that glisten like precious stones... and therefore a cat that gives you more pleasure.

Because it is a quality cat food—formulated and manufactured under the rigid supervision of experts in cat nutrition—Puss 'n Boots shows results quickly. It creates improved vitality, glossier coats, stronger teeth—all the qualities that you recognize in a cat which is in top looks and top health.

There's no mystery about the ingredients: whole fish caught from the clean sea and processed for luscious palatability, selected cereals that have ripened in the sun, and extra quantities of Vitamins B₁ and E.

Together they spell Puss 'n Boots, America's largest-selling cat food. And together they spell pride and pleasure for you, for you'll own a more beautiful, more companionable pet.

How the Natural Life Balance of WHOLE FISH is Retained in Puss 'n Boots

Costly Fillets, rich in essential proteins. Usually reserved for human consumption, but retained in healthful Puss 'n Boots.

Liver and Glands, for minerals and vitamins. Vital for health. Often extracted for medicinal use, but retained in Puss 'n Boots.

Bone Structure, for valuable calcium and phosphorus. Made crumbly and digestible, and retained in healthful Puss 'n Boots.
